A PECULIAR CASE.

Two Boys Accused of Felonious Assault by a Little Girl.

A very peculiar and sensational case came up in Squire Arkle's court last night.

James and Albert Clark were charged by Mrs. Casse Schrimp with felonious assault on her eight-year-old daughter, Lizzie.

There was, after the evidence of the child had been taken, seen to be no ground for the charge, and the defendants were discharged.

The child first gave her testimony, which in substance was that Albert and James Clark, on Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock, had come into the Schrimp's kitchen where she was, and had taken hold of her by the arm. When questioned further, she said nothing more was done.

Mrs. Schrimp testified that she was away from the house at the time of the alleged assault, and only heard of it later in the evening. She and her husband then started to go out, when the girl commenced to cry and said she was afraid the Clark boys would come back and hurt her.

Miss Kate Halpin, a neighbor, said she hadn't seen the boys near the Schrimp house during the day.

James Clark and Albert Clark when put on the stand testified that nothing of the sort alleged had happened, and with the aid of Chester Dean proved an alibi.

The Squire, at the request of Prosecutor Howard dismissed the charge.

In Squire Arkle's Court.

The case of Dorsey vs. Newman came up in Squire Arkle's court yesterday evening. The defendant, according to the plaintiff, allowed a stream of water to run over onto his premises, causing some damage to the foundation of his house. The suit was for $300 damages. It was compromised, the defendant paying $45 and costs.

The Rixey coal case was postponed by agreement by the attorneys until next Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

A Big Railroad Deal.

Col. S. L. Mooney, president of the Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati Railroad Company, closed a deal at Zanesville Tuesday by which that county surrenders the $118,000 stock it held in that road for $21,402, and at the same time the deal closing out the Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati railroad to the Columbus, Shawnee & Hocking Railroad Company was consummated. The latter company will widen the gauge to standard and change the route so as to shorten the distance to Bellaire from 110 to 87 miles. This would be done by the purchase of the Cincinnati, Wheeling & New York railroad, from Cumberland to Morgan Junction, and the building of thirty miles of new road from Seneca to Allentown, on the main line of the Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati. The main line of the new standard gauge road would follow the present Bellaire, Zanesville & Cincinnati to Cumberland; the Cincinnati, Wheeling & New York from Cumberland to Seneca; new route from Seneca to Allentown; and the present main line from Allentown to Bellaire. The portion of the main line from Allentown to Cumberland would not be abandoned, but would also be widened and used as a feeder to the new main line.

Transfers Recorded.

Clerk Hook yesterday admitted to record transfers of real estate as follows: February 14 by J. J. Jacob and H. M. Russell, special commissioners, to W. C. Beas, for $55, lot 4 of the Bellevue addition, near Attenheim.

February 14 by J. J. Jacob and H. M. Russell to J. L. Stroehlein, for $1,305, lots 16, 19, 20 and 21, at Bellevue.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY.

Marry Lockwood, a Bellaire Man, Gets a Suit of Clothes and Change From a Wheeling Merchant on a Forged Check.

Harry Lockwood, a young man probably twenty years of age, was arrested at Bellaire yesterday on the charge of forgery, preferred by W. J. Graus, a clerk in M. Gutman's store, who had sold him a suit of clothes and an overcoat last week and given him eight dollars in change for a check for $40.75. The check was on the First National Bank of Bellaire, and purported to be given by "Robert Cora" to "H. H. Heinze." Lockwood represented himself as Heinze, and said the check was from the proprietor of the cement works at Bellaire, and with an inquiry as to whether the check of "Robert Cora" for the amount was good they let the fellow have the goods and gave him the balance in money. It turns out that the cement works man spells his name Cory, and when the forged check was presented, payment was refused and it was returned to Wheeling. The clerk recognized Harry Lockwood as the fellow who presented it, and told the mayor of Bellaire the whole circumstances.

After young Lockwood was arrested he told the mayor about the same story he had told the clerk. He pleaded not guilty and was recognized to the common pleas court in a bond of $500. He furnished bail, his father and mother going upon the bond.

Harry Lockwood is a son of A. T. Lockwood, and has always been regarded as a correct kind of young man. He attends church regularly when at home, but only recently returned from Indiana, where he worked in a window glass factory. The similarity of the endorsement on the back of the forged check and the writing of Harry Lockwood, however, is too plain to those who preferred to think there was some mistake about the matter, and so far he makes no defense beyond saying he did not write the check. The matter will probably be settled if it can be, though since the offense was committed in Wheeling it is a wonder the prosecution was not made here instead of in Bellaire.

MR. BLUME, OF BELLAIRE,

Gets his Brother-in-Law, of New York, in Serious Trouble, by the Way he Carried an Umbrella.

Tuesday's issue of the New York World printed the following story:

Henry Blume, of Bellaire, O., has the bad habit, not confined by any means to countrymen, of carrying an umbrella under his arm at such an angle as to imperil the eye-sight of any one who may be behind him.

Guard William M. Wilson, sixty years old, and baldheaded, is on duty at the uptown "L" station, Eighth street and Second avenue, and has determined to effect, of possible, a reform of this dangerous practice.

Leo Huttir, of No. 316 East Seventy-ninth street, one year Wilson's junior, is an excitable real estate agent, who believes that railroad employees are not as courteous or gentlemanly as they might be.

Mr. Blume's visit to Mr. Huttir, his brother-in-law, brought these three dramatis personae together on last Saturday on the L station where Wilson is employed.

As the weather was threatening, Blume had his umbrella along and he carried it at that dangerous angle. Wilson read him a letter, and so Mr. Huttir says, shoved him so violently that had not Mr. Huttir caught him he would have fallen beneath the wheels of an approaching train.

Then Mr. Huttir aired his views about "L" men's boorishness and Wilson thrice tried to assault him. Mr. Huttir vainly looked for a policeman on the street and, returning to the "L" platform, was again attacked by Wilson. He then cut and scratched the guard's face and invited him to walk to the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth station and be arrested.

Wilson went, but got in a complaint of assault first, which, to Mr. Huttir's consternation, was taken and Mr. Huttir was locked up. In the Harlem police court his chagrin was further intensified when he was held for trial.

A Valuable Patent.

Mr. S. B. Williams, the patentee of the Williams balance elevator, says that a company will shortly be organized for the manufacture of the elevator, which is already having a large sale.

It has not been determined where the works will be built. Some of the wealthiest men in Ohio will be in the company. The capital stock will be $50,000 and fifty or seventy-five men will be employed.

Mr. Williams has twenty claims on the elevator. He has overcome the law of gravity and the elevator ascends as easily as it descends, no matter what the weight is. No electricity, water or steam is required. In short, the elevator works on the principle of a perpetual sea saw.
